Join the 124th New York State Volunteers for Infantry Drills, manuevers and Rifle demonstrations this weekend.

The 124th New York Infantry Regiment, commonly known as the Orange Blossoms, was a volunteer regiment from Orange County, New York, during the American Civil War. Formed in Goshen during the summer of 1862. The unit was officially mustered into United States Service on September 5, 1862, by Col. Augustus van Horne Ellis, the regiment was made up of volunteers from the surrounding towns and a core of veterans from the 71st New York State Militia. The 124th has two monuments at Gettysburg; one near the site where Colonel Ellis fell, and one at the unit's location during the defense of Cemetery Ridge.

The 124th New York State Volunteers is a Civil War era reenactment unit based in southern New York. The 124th seeks to portray the Union infantry volunteer of the Army of the Potomac as he appeared at the mid-war. Explore their camps, interact with the men, and witness as they demonstrate the tools, tactics, and firepower.
